Chapter 02

FORMAT & OVERVIEW OF THE MEE

What You'll Learn:

- The MEE Format – number of questions; time per essay question
- Purpose of the MEE – what skills are tested
- The MEE's Scope of Coverage – what subjects and topics are tested
- A breakdown of the 15 Subjects Tested on the MEE
- The Total Weight of an MEE Score – the percentage it counts toward your total bar exam score

MEE Test Format

The MEE consists of six 30-minute essay questions.

For in-person exam jurisdictions, the 6 essays are given in one 3-hour session. For remote exam jurisdictions, there are two 90-minute sessions with 3 essays per session.

We say 30-minutes per essay because that's the maximum amount of time you can spend on each essay question in order to complete all questions within each session (although the individual questions are not timed). You MUST practice answering each question within the 30-minute period. Otherwise, you will not have time to finish all the essays.

The MEE is given on the written test day of the bar exam (usually the first day of the exam).

Purpose of the MEE – What is it Testing?

The purpose of the MEE is to demonstrate an ability to communicate effectively in writing, which is the primary distinction between the MEE and MBE. This means showing an understanding of the law, how to apply it to the facts of a problem, and showing the reasoning on how you arrived at your conclusions.

According to the NCBE (the drafters of the exam), the MEE tests the following skills:

- Identify legal issues raised by a hypothetical factual situation;
- Separate material which is relevant from that which is not;
- Present a reasoned analysis of the relevant issues in a clear, concise, and well-organized composition; and
- Demonstrate an understanding of the fundamental legal principles relevant to the probable solution of the issues raised by the factual situation.

MEE Scope – The Official MEE Subject Matter Outline

The MEE Subject Matter Outline presents the MEE’s scope of coverage, and is prepared by the National Conference of Bar Examiners (“NCBE”).

The 2021 MEE Subject Matter Outline can be found here or here.

Take the time to familiarize yourself with this document. It outlines the scope of topics tested for each Subject Area.

Subjects Tested on the MEE

There are 15 Subjects Tested on the MEE:

- Agency
- Partnerships
- Corporations & Limited Liability Companies
- Civil Procedure
- Conflict of Laws
- Constitutional Law
- Contracts (including UCC Article 2)
- Criminal Law & Procedure
- Evidence
- Family Law
- Real Property
- Secured Transactions (UCC Article 9)
- Torts
- Trusts & Future Interests
- Wills & Estates

Any combination of the subjects above may be tested on the MEE (it varies from exam to exam). Some questions may contain more than one area of law.

Items of Note:

- Negotiable Instruments/Commercial Paper (UCC Articles 3 & 4) was removed from the MEE as of the February 2015 exam. Thus, ignore these questions in older MEE Questions & Analyses released by the bar examiners.
- Conflict of Laws issues are embedded in essays with other MEE topic areas. They never appear as stand-alone essay questions, and will ALWAYS be in combination with another subject area.
- Agency, Partnerships, and Corporations & LLC's are listed as one subject in the MEE Subject Matter Outline as Business Associations. We have listed them separately since examinees usually study these subjects individually.
- Trusts and Estates are listed as one subject in the MEE Subject Matter Outline. We have listed them separately since examinees usually study these subjects individually.

Total Weight of MEE Score

The MEE is worth 30% of your total exam score in most states – including all UBE jurisdictions, such as New York and New Jersey.

In other jurisdictions, the MEE/essays is normally worth between 30% and 45%. Some jurisdictions have additional state essays and/or have a minimum passing score for the MEE/essay portion.

In Chapter 8 of this guide on Grading & Scoring, we have included a chart showing how much the MEE is worth in each jurisdiction.

Chapter 03

A STEP-BY-STEP APPROACH ON HOW TO READ, ORGANIZE, & DRAFT YOUR ANSWER TO AN MEE ESSAY QUESTION

What You'll Learn:

- How to Allocate Your Time Per MEE Question
- Our 5-Step Approach on How to Read an Essay Question & Draft Your Answer
- How to Structure and Draft Your Essay Answer using the IRAC Method

We strongly recommend that you have a pre-determined approach on how you will tackle an MEE question on exam day – meaning how you will review the essay question and draft your answer all within 30 minutes.

Having an approach will make the exam much less stressful, and you can practice it prior to the exam so it will be second nature when taking the actual test.

MEE Timing – How to Effectively Allocate Your Time

Since you have 30-minutes per MEE question, you should allocate your time as follows:

10-15 minutes: Reading the essay question and Organizing your answer (ideally no more than 10 minutes).

15-20 minutes: Drafting your answer.

You must keep yourself on track, and NOT spend more than 30-minutes per essay question. Otherwise, you'll never finish all six essays.

MEE Step-by-Step Approach – How to Read, Organize, and Draft Your Answer

Here is our recommended step-by-step approach to tackle an MEE question within 30-minutes.

Step # 1: Read the Call of Question First – (1 minute).

The call is the question prompt(s) at the end of the fact pattern, which asks you to discuss certain issues. Reading the call first helps you identify the subject matter and issues being tested, so you know exactly what to look for when reading the fact pattern.

Step # 2: Read the Fact Pattern, and Mark It Up – (7-10 minutes).

Read the entire fact pattern carefully, and while doing so you should mark it up to note key items. For example, you can make notes in the margins or circle/underline anything that is important (e.g. facts, issues, dates, names of parties). Marking up the fact pattern will make the important items easy to reference later on when organizing and drafting your answer.

If you have time, you may want to read the fact pattern a second time to make sure you fully understand the facts.

REMOTE EXAM TIP

Use the Software to “mark-up” the Essay Questions.

Unfortunately for the remote exam, you’ll be limited to the mark-up features in the software. This will likely be highlighting only, but be sure to check the specifics for your exam jurisdiction. For “marking-up” the question, we suggest: (a) using those software features; AND/OR (b) by making very short notes in either the “Answer screen” or the “virtual scratch paper”.

Step # 3: Read the Call of the Question AGAIN – (1 minute).

Reading the call of the question a second time will make sure you understand the issues the bar examiners want you to discuss, and will confirm that you didn’t overlook anything.

Step # 4: Organize Your Answer & Make a SHORT Outline of the Issues/Topics – (1-3 minutes).

It's best to organize your answer by making a very short outline (or checklist) of the issues and topics that you will discuss. Something short like "negligence – proximate cause" or "supplemental jurisdiction" should suffice. The goal here is to map out the topics/issues so you'll have a list to reference when drafting your answer (and so you don't forget hit anything).

Use the call – the question prompts – at the end of the essay question to organize your outline (and eventually your essay answer).

Often the call will tell you to discuss certain issues/points, which are numbered or lettered. It's best to organize your answer in the same order. Below is an example.

Example of Question Call with "Specific Prompts"
(from July 2017 MEE, Essay 2 – Constitutional Law)

1. Can the bank maintain a suit in federal court against State A for damages? Explain.
2. Can the bank maintain a suit in federal court against the state Superintendent of Banking to enjoin her from enforcing the State A statute? Explain.
3. Is the State A statute unconstitutional? Explain.

Sample Short Outline of the Issues/Topics
(for July 2017 MEE, Essay 2)

- 1) 11th Amend. – State Sovereign Immunity
 - State cannot be sued for money damages
- 2) 11th Amend. – State Sovereign Immunity
 - Exception for allowing suit for injunctive relief against a state official
- 3) Negative Commerce Clause
 - Discriminatory Regulations
 - Unduly Burdensome Regulations

Sometimes, an essay question will contain a “general call” where the question prompt is not broken out like the example above (this occurs often in Wills & Estates questions).

Example of “General Call” Question
(from July 2017 MEE, Essay 4)

To whom should Testator’s estate be distributed? Explain.

In such instance, you will need to organize the answer yourself. For “general call” questions, we suggest organizing your answer by either the Parties, Events, or Legal Issues.

Remember your outline should only be a short list, and MUST be done quickly.

Your time is precious, so you don’t want to waste much time on this step. Thus, we recommend hand writing this outline on scrap paper or somewhere on the essay question page (at the end of the page or in the margin). DON’T write this outline on the computer because most people have a tendency to write more than they would on paper, which is a waste of time. Writing your outline on paper forces you to keep it short and write it quickly.

REMOTE EXAM TIP

Practice outlining your essay answer only on the computer!

Make sure to practice outlining only on the computer, and keep your outline short and to the point (just like when using paper).

Remember, the outline is meant to be only a checklist of what you'll write in a full answer. A good way to keep yourself in check is to limit yourself to 1 line of text per bullet point.

Of course, you can write a little more if needed, but generally following this rule of thumb will keep you on track and make sure you don't waste too much time outlining your answer.

Step # 5: Draft Your Answer using IRAC – (15-20 minutes).

Using the organization in your short outline, start drafting your essay answer using IRAC format.

IRAC is a method for organizing your legal analysis so the essay grader can easily review your answer.

- | | |
|--------------------------|---|
| Issue | State the issue presented by the essay question. |
| Rule | State the applicable legal rule(s). |
| Aalysis | Apply the legal rule(s) to the facts of the question. You must use the facts in the question to explain how the legal rule leads to the conclusion. DO NOT merely recite the facts; instead link the facts to the elements of the legal rule to justify the conclusion. |
| Conclusion | State a short conclusion – the result of the analysis. This should be a single sentence. |

When using IRAC:

- Use Headings! You MUST make sure to include a heading for each IRAC analysis.
- Each item in IRAC should be in a separate paragraph.
- When there are multiple issues to address (there almost always are), then you must write a separate IRAC analysis for each issue.
- For bar exam essays DO NOT discuss both sides (unlike a law school exam).

The IRAC structure should be used for two reasons. First, the MEE Instructions state that IRAC should be used:

“Demonstrate your ability to reason and analyze. Each of your answers should show an understanding of the facts, a recognition of the issues included [Issue], a knowledge of the applicable principles of law [Rule], and the reasoning [Analysis] by which you arrive at your conclusions [Conclusion]. The value of your answer depends not as much upon your conclusions as upon the presence and quality of the elements mentioned above.”¹

Second, most Sample Examinee Answers that have been released as exemplars follow the IRAC format.²

² See, Sample Examinee MEE Answers for New York, Minnesota, and Arkansas.

SAMPLE IRAC ANALYSIS
(for July 2017 MEE, Essay 2, Point One)

1. Bank v. State A in federal court

The issue is whether this action is permitted under the 11th Amendment.

ISSUE

The 11th Amendment prohibits a party from suing a state or a state agency in federal court. There are certain exceptions to the 11th Amendment, such as when: (a) the state explicitly consents to waive its Eleventh Amendment protections; (b) the suit pertains to federal laws adopted under Section 5 of the 14th Amendment; (c) the suit seeks only injunctive relief against a state official for conduct that violates the Constitution or federal law; or (d) the suit seeks money damages from a state official.

RULE

Here, the bank is suing State A directly, along with the superintendent, seeking damages. There is no indication that the statute provides a waiver of the 11th Amendment, and there is no applicable Congressional statute so there is not congressional abrogation.

ANALYSIS

Therefore, the suit is not permitted under the 11th Amendment, and the bank cannot maintain the suit against State A in federal court.

CONCLUSION

Chapter 04

15 MEE TIPS TO INCREASE YOUR ESSAY SCORE

We are constantly asked by examinees on how they can increase their essay score. To help you out, we have compiled a list of our top tips and strategies we most recommend!

1. Prioritize your Studying by Focusing on the Highly Tested MEE Subjects, Topics, and Rules.

Optimize your essay performance by memorizing the HIGHLY tested MEE topics and rules first before moving onto lesser tested areas. Remember the topic categories within each subject are NOT created equal as some are tested in a higher percentage than others.

You can use our Free MEE Frequency Analysis to prioritize your studying – it shows how often and the percentage each subject and topic was tested. Our MEE Essay Priority Outline also contains High, Medium, Low priority designations for each rule, model rule statements, and a listing of the specific exams where each rule was tested.

2. DON'T cite cases or statutes in your answer.

Never cite to specific cases or statute sections in your answer UNLESS they are provided in the essay question. The bar examiners DO NOT require that citations be included, so don't waste any time doing so.

3. DON'T argue both sides.

For the bar exam, you need to pick one side that you think is correct, and make a conclusion accordingly. This is contrary to what you did on law school exams.

When the issue can go either way, the bar examiners will normally award full credit for a conclusion that is well-reasoned. For example, on the July 2016 MEE concerning a contract assignability issue, the bar examiners stated: "Some examinees might argue against assignability of the contract because there are inevitable differences between the paint jobs, such as the relative ease of dealing with the homeowners. If well-reasoned, such analysis should receive credit." (See July 2016 MEE, Essay 5, Point One).

So, don't worry if it's a close or undetermined issue – just pick a side, and plug-in your IRAC analysis for it.

4. Make it easy for graders to review your essay and give you points.

Each grader has limited time to go through your essay, as they have an endless amount to review and cannot spend too much time on any one essay answer. Because of this they may read through answers quickly. Your job is to make it so they can easily spot the different parts of your essay answer so you can be awarded the maximum number of points.

Using headings and structuring your essay using IRAC format is key, as you don't want graders to get lost or miss anything. By the end of your practice, you should be able to write essays in a clear, organized fashion. For more information on how to structure and draft your essay answer, please see Chapter 3 of this guide.

5. Your writing should be clear, concise, and to the point!

Writing a complete answer that is clear and concise will make it easy for the grader to read your essay, and in turn get you a higher score. You need to sound like a lawyer, but avoid being verbose. Get right to the point you're making!

6. Draft a complete essay answer.

Each portion of your answer is only worth a set amount of points, the more you hit, the more points you get. Thus, the more complete your answer is, the higher your score will be.

The end goal is to plug-in each of the parts of your IRAC analysis as quickly as possible to draft a complete answer that hits all of the issues tested. By taking more practice exams, will get you in the mode of writing essays quickly. It will also give you practice with structuring your answer in a complete succinct manner.

7. DON'T volunteer irrelevant or immaterial information.

You will not receive credit by providing irrelevant or unnecessary information in your answer. Instead, you will only be wasting precious time that you need to finish all 6 essay questions.

As such, you should follow these guidelines when drafting your answer:

- Only address the issues in the fact pattern that pertain to the question. The key for doing well on an essay is determining the exact issues the examiners want you to discuss. The majority of the time the call of the question – the question prompts at the end – specifically tell you what to discuss.
- Similarly, only state the rule(s) of law that are applicable to the analysis of the issues. For example, you will receive no points for stating an exception to a legal rule that is completely irrelevant to the fact pattern or issues.

8. Make NO assumptions.

Never assume facts that aren't in the fact pattern of the question. Similarly, don't assume that each essay question only covers a single area of law. It's possible that some of the questions will contain more than one area of law that you are responsible to know.

9. You CAN answer the questions in any order you wish.

Generally, you should answer the MEE essay questions in chronological order. But, if you are overwhelmed by a question, it may be beneficial to move on to another question which addresses a topic you are stronger in to gain some confidence going forward.

If you do this, you must make sure you still spend only 30-minutes per question. Each jurisdiction controls the laptop software for the exam, so just make sure that you are able to easily skip to writing different essays during the exam.

10. If you don't know a rule, make one up.

This way you still may get partial credit for spotting the issue, providing an analysis, and stating a conclusion.

For example, on the July 2013 MEE (Essay 6), the rule for piercing the veil of an LLC was tested. This was the first time such rule was tested (for an LLC and not a corporation), and as such, almost no one knew the exact rule. In this instance, you could have used the rule for piercing a corporation (which is very similar). In the above-average examinee answers released by states, this is exactly what many examinees did.

This is a perfect example of how you can move forward even when the exam throws you a curveball. It may not be the full points (as the rule statement will be wrong), but at least you may get some points for the issue, analysis, and conclusion – and more points equals a higher score.

11. Have a clear idea of when you need to start and finish each MEE essay.

You only have 30 minutes to complete each MEE question. It is recommended that you use a timer to keep track of your progress while taking the exam. Just make sure the timer/watch complies with your state’s bar exam guidelines for acceptable items in the exam room – some jurisdictions do not allow watches or timers, but will have a clock clearly visible in the exam room that you should take advantage of.

For a 3-hour in-person MEE session, you can use the following intervals as your guide:

Question # Completed	Time
MEE Question 1	30 minutes
MEE Question 2	1 hour
MEE Question 3	1 hour 30 minutes
MEE Question 4	2 hours
MEE Question 5	2 hours 30 minutes
MEE Question 6	3 hours

For a 1.5-hour remote MEE session, you can use the following intervals as your guide:

Question # Completed	Time
MEE Question 1	30 minutes
MEE Question 2	1 hour
MEE Question 3	1 hour 30 minutes

12. Make sure to include ALL items you noted (when reading the essay question) into your answer.

In Chapter 3 (Step # 4), we recommend that you make a short outline of the issues after reading the essay question. Make sure you refer to this outline when drafting your answer.

It's easy to forget or lose track of every item when drafting your answer. This outline will keep you on track, and guide you on the order in which to discuss the issues in your answer. This may seem like common sense, but we have repeatedly heard of examinees recalling after the exam was finished that they forgot to include issues they spotted.

13. Read and Know the MEE Instructions prior to taking the exam.

Even though the MEE Instructions are contained on the back cover of your test booklet, you NEVER want to waste time reading these instructions on test day.

The MEE instructions are freely available on the NCBE website, so make sure you review them prior to the exam. The current "Instructions for Taking the MEE" can be found here or here.

14. Have a mental checklist ready of rules and exceptions for major topic areas.

Having a mental checklist to review in your head for major topic areas can help you streamline your issue spotting and make sure you hit all the points necessary for a complete answer.

To illustrate, whenever a specific issue comes up, you would run through the different concepts in your head and note down which to apply in your IRAC analyses. For example, when an Agency-Authority issue comes up, you would note the following: agency relationship, actual authority, apparent authority, inherent agency power.

You can base these "mental checklists" off of your outlines or the topics listed in the MEE Subject Matter Outline released by NCBE found here or here.

15. If a rule is tested more than once in a single essay question, DON'T re-write the rule each time.

Time is valuable on the MEE, so you want to use it wisely. To save time writing the same rule multiple times in a single essay, you can either: (a) refer the grader back to the first instance where you wrote the rule; or (b) copy-and-paste the rule statement – if you're using a computer to write your essays.

The better option is to copy-and-paste the rule again into each part used, so that you make it as easy as possible for the reader to grade your essay. For examinees who handwrite the exam, we understand that this isn't possible, so you should just refer the grader back to the other part of your essay answer.

The bar examiners have even endorsed both methods. Specifically, the NCBE has stated:

"Some examinees may discuss the elements of enforceability of a possessory security interest in the answer to [issue 1] and refer back to that discussion in their answer to this [issue]. Such examinees should get credit for that analysis as part of their answer to [issue 2]. Examinees may organize their answers either way and receive full credit." (See, Feb. 2019 MEE Analysis, Essay 2, Point Two, note section).

This time saving tip should only be used when writing a rule statement multiple times within a single essay question. NEVER refer to something contained in another essay question because you will not receive any points for the same.

Chapter 05

HOW TO STUDY & PREPARE FOR THE MEE (WITH TIPS & BEST PRACTICES)

What You'll Learn:

- Our 5-Step Approach to Effectively Prepare for the MEE
- Study Tips & Best Practices to Master the MEE

Now that you know how the MEE works, what's the best way to prepare for it without getting overwhelmed? Below you will find our step-by-step strategy to effectively study and prepare for the MEE section of the bar exam.

Step 1: Set the Foundation – Obtain a Good Working Knowledge of the Law for Each Subject.

You can do this by bar review courses, lectures, books, outlines, or anything else that will help you learn the law. You don't need to have everything memorized perfectly at this stage – you just need a good working knowledge of the subject (a.k.a. a good grasp of the law or reviewed the subject in some way). This is the foundation you will build on in later steps.

Step 2: Breakdown each subject into a condensed outline or document.

After learning the law for a subject, you should condense that subject into something you can use for future review (outline, mini-outline, attack sheets, flashcards, etc.). This is essential for breaking down and committing the legal rules tested to memory, and will be your go-to document while studying. You can then add to this document later on as you continue your studying and reviewing MEE practice questions.

If you don't have time to create your own outline, you can buy one or use a friend's outline and then add your notes to it.

Step 3: Prioritize ... then Memorize.

Studying efficiently and effectively is the key to doing well on the MEE. You will need to memorize a lot of material, but prioritizing what you study is essential to passing.

Very often the bar examiners test the same fundamental rules of law. This is because there are fundamental legal principles that every licensed attorney should know (e.g. contract formation, negligence elements), and is why certain legal concepts are tested more often than other obscure topics. Even when the obscure concepts are tested, they are usually not worth a large percentage of the essay question.

As such, you should optimize your essay performance by focusing more time memorizing the HIGHLY tested MEE topics and rules. Once you have the rules prioritized, focus on memorizing the High priority (most frequently tested) rules first and foremost, and then work your way down through the rules tested less often.

STUDY TIP

Use our Frequency Chart to Know How Often Each MEE Topic & Rule has been Tested!

We have already done the hard work for you, and analyzed all of the released MEE essays (from 1995 to the present).

You can use our Free MEE Frequency Analysis to prioritize your studying – it shows how often and the percentage each subject and topic was tested.

– or –

Use our MEE Essay Priority Outline, which also contains High, Medium, Low priority designations for each rule, model rule statements, and a listing of the specific exams each rule was tested.

Step 4: Practice & Application – Issue Spotting and Writing Essays.

Practice makes perfect, and to really hone your essay skills you need to do two things:

1. Practice your issue spotting ability, and
2. Write practice essays under timed conditions.

Both are essential to create connections between the law tested, spotting issues in an essay fact pattern, and drafting a passing essay answer.

Issue Spotting Practice:

Going through past MEE essay questions and answers is the best way to practice your issue spotting skills. With practice, you will become better and quicker at identifying what the bar examiners are testing and looking for in an answer.

It makes sense to go through as many past essays as possible. However, for most examinees writing full answers to hundreds of essays is just not possible (especially while preparing for the MBE & MPT sections). To streamline the review process, you can use Issue Spotting to go through many more essays.

Here's our 3-step Issue Spotting process:

1. Read the essay question.
2. Make a quick outline of the issues and rules of law tested. Essentially, this is an outline of what you would discuss if you wrote out your full essay answer.
3. Compare your outline of the issues/law tested to a model MEE answer to see what issues you spotted and what you missed.

You can use MEE Questions and Model Analyses (Answers) released by the NCBE to practice.

We have also created a quick way to practice issue spotting with our MEE Smart Review & Issue Spotting guide:

- It contains past MEE essay questions, plus summary answers (from Feb. 2004 to present).
- Essays are organized by subject area in reverse chronological order (newest to oldest), and each essay shows a list of the issues tested by point value.

This way you can review essays per subject area starting with the most recent essays, and see what the bar examiners are looking for in an essay answer.

Remember, that Issue Spotting practice is in addition to writing full essay answers. Thus, you should leave a few essays per subject (the most recent ones) that you'll write full answers for, and then perform Issue Spotting on as many of the remaining essays as possible. That way there is no overlap.

Essay Writing Practice:

You MUST practice writing essays to do well on the MEE. We know it's painful and you don't want to do it, but set aside time to write at least 1-2 essays per subject area (ideally you should write even more than that).

Writing out practice essays under timed conditions is in addition to other essay review such as passively reading past exams or performing issue spotting exercises. This may seem like overkill, but we commonly hear examinees fail because they didn't practice writing essays in exam-type conditions.

STUDY TIP

Practice like it's the ACTUAL exam.

You want to simulate actual test day conditions as much as possible to minimize any surprise on exam day. As such, you should take MEE questions under timed conditions. You should even try simulating the exam environment as much as possible (e.g. taking practice exams at a desk with the same laptop you will be using on exam day).

For timing, remember you must keep a pace of 30-minutes per MEE question. Practicing while timed may be uncomfortable at first, but it will condition you for the actual exam setting.

STUDY TIP

Grade Yourself

Grading your practice essays taken against the MEE Model Analyses keeps you accountable, and can help you spot your problem areas or if you have an issue finishing questions in the allotted time.

You may even want to have others grade your practice essays, either through a bar prep program, tutor, or an attorney friend. The goal here is get real honest feedback on what improvements can be made.

REMOTE EXAM TIP

Practice like it's the actual Remote exam.

Practice like you're taking the real remote exam! That means only using a computer for BOTH (1) reading the essay question, and (2) drafting your answer. If your remote exam software access is limited to only the mock exam (and not practice questions), then we suggest using the method below.

To simulate actual exam conditions, we suggest working on your computer using a "split screen"... with one side of your screen showing the Question and the other side of your screen being your word processing software for drafting the Answer (e.g. Microsoft Word, Google Docs, etc.). Once you take the mock exam for your State/Jurisdiction, you should tweak your screen practice layout to more closely mimic the exam software.

Step 5: Continue to Practice & Memorize the Law.

During the entire bar review period, you should be memorizing the law, practice writing essays, and honing your issue spotting ability. This way you are constantly building on your: (1) knowledge of the law – by memorizing rules of law; and (2) ability to read and write essays – by constant practice.

Chapter 06

MEE PRACTICE: HOW TO USE MODEL ESSAY ANSWERS & SAMPLE EXAMINEE ANSWERS EFFECTIVELY

What You'll Learn:

- The Difference Between Model Essay Answers vs. Released Examinee Answers
- The Best Way to Use Sample Examinee Answers (released by MEE jurisdictions)
- How to Use the Model MEE Analyses Released by the NCBE

There are two types of MEE answers you should use in your bar preparation:

1. Model Answers/Analyses, and
2. Sample Examinee Answers.

Model Essay Answers are perfect essay answers, normally written by the drafters of the bar exam (the NCBE) or bar review companies/tutors. The NCBE releases past MEE Questions and Analyses – these Analyses are model answers provided to jurisdictions to assist with grading essays.

Sample Examinee Answers are actual essay answers written by examinees that received a high or above average score. These answers are released by a few MEE jurisdictions.

We suggest that you use each in very specific ways to prepare for the exam.

How to Use the Sample Examinee Essay Answers

In our opinion, Sample Examinee Answers should only be used in one way... to see what a good (passing) essay looks like.

Specifically, you should review a few past examinee essays to see:

1. The level of detail needed in your answer – it is much less than shown in a Model MEE Analysis;

2. The structure and organization of a good essay; and
3. What a well-written IRAC analysis looks like.

Remember, you do not need to be perfect to pass the bar exam – almost all of the examinee answers do not include every possible issue, and some even have incorrect statements of law. You only need to be better than average to do well on the MEE essay section.

Reviewing model essays are good for many reasons (as discussed below), but can add a certain level of stress for examinees because they think writing a perfect essay is the goal. That's why examinee answers are a great tool to dispel the unrealistic idea of a "perfect essay," and will remind you of what's really required to pass.

Other than that, you should NOT use examinee answers for any other purpose. This includes learning the law because the answers often contain incorrect or outdated rule statements.

How to Use the Model MEE Analyses (Answers)

Many bar review companies provide model essay answers, but hands down the best to use when studying are the official "MEE Questions & Analyses" released by the NCBE – the drafters of the MEE essays.

Why are these the best to use? There are three primary reasons:

1. They are illustrative of the discussions that might appear in excellent answers to the questions.
2. They are provided to the user jurisdictions to assist graders in grading the examination. The grading percentages are also next to each essay topic "point" – e.g. "Point Two (35%)".
3. They address all the legal and factual issues the drafters intended to raise in the questions.

Essentially, you can see what the graders used to score past essays, and can see every issue raised in the essay question.

The model MEE Analyses are ideal to grade yourself when writing practice essays because they contain every issue, rule statement, analysis, and conclusion required for an IRAC analysis. They can also be used for issue spotting practice, as discussed in Chapter 5 (Step #4) of this guide.

Just keep in mind that the MEE Analyses are answers drafted by the examiners who have unlimited time and access to law books, statutes, and cases when drafting. What you see in the model answers/analyses is not realistic of what most examinees write to pass the exam, so don't be overly critical that you need to answer everything perfectly on test day.

Important Things to Know when Using Past MEE Questions & Analyses

When reviewing the essay analyses released by the NCBE, it is important to keep a few things in mind:

- Negotiable Instruments/Commercial Paper (UCC Articles 3 & 4) was removed from the MEE as of the February 2015 exam. Thus, ignore these questions in older MEE Questions & Analyses.
- Six of the current MEE subjects (Constitutional Law, Contracts, Criminal Law & Procedure, Evidence, Real Property, and Torts) have only been tested on the essays since July 2007. Note, the subject of Sales (UCC Article 2) was tested on a few exams prior to July 2007.
- Now, all MEE and UBE jurisdictions use a common set of six (6) essay questions. However, previous exam years had a different number of MEE essays:
 - Feb. 1995 to Feb. 2007 – MEE booklets each contain seven (7) essay questions; and
 - July 2007 to July 2013 – MEE booklets each contain nine (9) essay questions.
- The MEE Analyses contain separate “Summary” and “Legal Problems” sections. DO NOT include such separate sections in your essay answers – these were provided for grader purposes. Please see Chapter 3 of this guide for how to properly structure your essay answer.
- On the actual test, the essay questions are simply numbered rather than being identified by area of law. Thus, the bar examiners will not tell you the subject(s) the question is testing on the exam – unlike what is shown in the past MEE Questions & Analyses released.

NOTE: Be careful when reviewing examinee answers for other years not listed above. We have intentionally omitted certain exam years because the MEE was not used in that jurisdiction at the time. For example, DO NOT use any New York bar exam released essay answers prior to July 2016 – when NY switched to the UBE format. These were omitted because New York administered different state specific essays prior to that exam – those examinee answers were based on New York specific law.

Chapter 08

MEE GRADING & SCORING

What You'll Learn:

- How the MEE is Graded & Scored
- MEE Grading Standards... with MEE Grading Key
- How an MEE Score is Determined – Raw Scores and Scaled Scores
- The Total Percentage Weight of an MEE Score (in each jurisdiction)

What You REALLY Need to Know About MEE Grading and Scoring

Each jurisdiction grades MEE essay answers using their own set of grading standards. Each essay is graded on a numbered scale based on the quality of the answer. The grading scale varies per jurisdiction (e.g. 0-6, 1-10).

All written scores are combined, and then scaled using a complex formula. For UBE jurisdictions, the written portions of the exam (MEE + MPT) are combined and scaled to a number between 1-200.

Other than that, you shouldn't really worry about the specifics of grading and scoring. Your main focus should be on studying the law, essay practice so you write an excellent essay answer, and comparing your practice essays to the MEE Analyses released by the NCBE.

We have included more grading specifics below if you're really interested, but feel free to skip the rest of this chapter, especially if you're short on time.

DISCLAIMER

The specifics on grading and scoring (reviewed below) get very detailed. Feel free to skip the rest of this chapter if you're not interested or short on time.

How an MEE Score is Determined (Raw Scores → Scaled Scores)

Outlined below is the entire process of how an examinee's MEE score is calculated:

- Step # 1: Each essay answer is graded and given a “raw score” using relative grading. The score given is based on the quality of the answer, and the grading scale varies per jurisdiction (e.g. 0-6, 1-5). “Relative grading” means scoring and ranking the essay answer “relative” to other examinee answers in that jurisdiction.
 - Graders use a process called Calibration to ensure fairness when grading and rank-ordering papers. Calibration is achieved by test-grading “calibration packets” of 30 student papers to see what the range of answers is, and then resolving any differences in grading among those graders and/or papers. This process ensures graders are using the same criteria so grading judgments are consistent for rank-ordering.³
- Step # 2: The written raw scores are combined, and then scaled to the MBE. This is the examinee’s “scaled score”. Specifically, the combined “raw score” is scaled to the mean and standard deviation of the Scaled MBE Scores for that examination. Scaling adjusts for possible differences in average question difficulty and grader performance across different administrations of the examination.
 - For UBE Jurisdictions, an examinee’s scores for the MEE and MPT are combined, which comprises the examinee’s combined written “raw score” for the exam. This combined written “raw score” is then scaled putting the written raw score on a 200-point scale. Specifically, the combined “raw score” is scaled to the mean and standard deviation of the Scaled MBE Scores for all examinees of the examinee’s respective jurisdiction (the state in which you take the bar exam). This means that an examinee’s written portion is scaled “relative” to the other examinee answers in that jurisdiction.
- Step # 3: The total written “scaled score” is weighted accordingly, depending on how much the written component is worth for that jurisdiction’s bar exam. For UBE jurisdictions, the total written “scaled score” is 50% of the total exam score (30% for the MEE + 20% for the MPT).

*Note: South Dakota and Palau do not scale the written component to the MBE. Instead, each jurisdiction requires a separate minimum passing score for each component.

³ See, 13 Best Practices for Grading Essays and Performance Tests by Sonja Olson, The Bar Examiner, Winter 2019-2020 (Vol. 88, No. 4), at Item 5.

Total Weight of MEE Score

The MEE is worth 30% of your total exam score in most states – including all UBE jurisdictions, such as New York and New Jersey.

In other jurisdictions, the MEE/essays is normally worth between 30% and 45%. Some jurisdictions have additional state essays and/or have a minimum passing score for the MEE/essay portion.

MEE Grading Standards

All MEE jurisdictions use “relative grading”, which means scoring and ranking the essay answer “relative” to other examinee answers in that jurisdiction. Under relative grading, each essay question is graded on a numbered scale based on the quality of the answer. The grading scale varies per jurisdiction (e.g. 0-6, 1-10).

Many jurisdictions do not release their grading standards or grading scale, but a few states do.

Here are the grading standards and scale for Washington State.

Score	MEE Grading Key / Scale
6	A 6 answer is a very good answer. A 6 answer usually indicates that the applicant has a thorough understanding of the facts, a recognition of the issues presented and the applicable principles of law, and the ability to reason to a conclusion in a well-written paper.
5	A 5 answer is an above average answer. A 5 answer usually indicates that the applicant has a fairly complete understanding of the facts, recognizes most of the issues and the applicable principles of law, and has the ability to reason fairly well to a conclusion in a relatively well-written paper.
4	A 4 answer demonstrates an average answer . A 4 answer usually indicates that the applicant understands the facts fairly well, recognizes most of the issues and the applicable principles of law, and has the ability to reason to a conclusion in a satisfactorily written paper.
3	A 3 answer demonstrates a somewhat below average answer. A 3 answer usually indicates that it is, on balance, inadequate. It shows that the applicant has only a limited understanding of the facts and issues and the applicable principles of law, and a limited ability to reason to a conclusion in a below average written paper.
2	A 2 answer demonstrates a below average answer. A 2 answer usually indicates that it is, on balance, significantly flawed. It shows that the applicant has only a rudimentary understanding of the facts and/or law, very limited ability to reason to a conclusion, and poor writing ability.
1	A 1 answer is among the worst answers. A 1 answer usually indicates a failure to understand the facts and the law. A 1 answer shows virtually no ability to identify issues, reason, or write in a cogent manner.
0	A 0 answer indicates that there is no response to the question or that it is completely unresponsive to the question.

For other MEE jurisdictions, we have confirmed the following raw essay grading scales (see chart below). The NCBE recommends a six-point (0 to 6) raw grading scale,⁴ but jurisdictions can use another scale. If you know a grading scale that isn't listed, we would appreciate that you contact us so we may include it.

Jurisdiction	Essay Grading Scale (Raw Scale Per Essay)
Arizona	Each written answer is awarded a numerical grade from 0 (lowest) to 6 (highest).
Arkansas	Scale ranging from 65 to 85
Colorado	1 to 6 point scale
Illinois	0 to 6 point scale
Massachusetts	0 to 7 point scale
Missouri	10-point scale
New Jersey	0 to 6 point scale
New York	0 to 10 point scale
Vermont	0 to 6 point scale
Washington State	0 to 6 point scale

Even if you are taking the bar exam in another jurisdiction that uses a slightly different raw grading scale, you can still use the Washington State example above as a guidepost for what is considered a high scoring essay answer. The above grading standards can also be used to self-grade your practice essay answers.
